MURIVIAN

LINE HIGH SCHOOL

MURIAN

JUNE 1936

The Year 1936 celebrates not only the fourteenth anniversary of the yearbook but also the initial appearance of this annual as the "Murivian," a name derived from Brookline's historical title "Muddy River."

Each page of the "Murivian" is designed to record the achievements of the school body. The entire book, however, is intended to reflect the fine ideals and aspirations of the school in a manner which will inspire those in our class and in succeeding classes to maintain the loyalty and spirit of Brookline High School.

Brookline High School has been extremely fortunate in having among its faculty, teachers of unquestioned distinction. Many of them remain in the school, continuing to give their services to the students. Others have left, leaving the school with a great feeling of personal loss. It is hard to find another person to fill a place that is almost sacred because of the last teacher's contributions.

There is a purpose in the life of a teacher which is far greater than the mere imparting of knowledge to students. Through the friendly counsel and guidance of many instructors, students have "found themselves" and the field of work for which they are best fitted. The teacher who is a friend to the pupils is giving the highest possible contribution to the school and to the individual student whose future will, in some measure. depend upon the influence of his instructors.

The appreciation that a pupil feels in his heart for the training and understanding given by a teacher is not always expressed, but the genuine interest of the instructor, the warm, friendly manner, and the sincere endeavor to teach will long be imprinted upon his memory.

In Memoriam

ABRAHAM PATICK INEZ PEARLSTEIN

HENRY WALG

Life is a queer affair,
A game, a toy, a plaything,
A sudden gleam, a flare
Of light, a pretty thing . . .
And takes a good, strong gust to blow it out.

Perhaps a flash, a burst
Of flame; or just a spark
That catches weakly, first,
But lives to make its mark
Upon the tender kindling, mother-got.

Or then, a Teddy bear
A woolly, shaggy beast
To bite, and snarl, and tear,
Alive; but stuffed, at least,
Finds there within your heart a friendly spot.

By chance, a big plum pie
And filled with deeds of you
Which is your task to try
In taste, and thoughtfully chew;
For you must like it cold or fiery hot.

So when you find it's done,
Why worry with the turn
Of Fate that hid the sun,
Or, looking backwards, burn
On childish dreams that even God forgot?

James L. Schaye

THE CLASSICAL SPIRIT

QUINQUARTUS

HERBERT LANDSMAN

Song:

The altar of Minerva's shrine is bare—the columns turned to dust,
The silver stairs, the copper door is there—but reddish with the rust,
Then, in glad days of godly light, the foreign pagans came to see
This ancient ruin the rulers built that all hearts might at least be free,
They saw the pictured wall remained although the roof had long since left,
They looked upon the ruin again—its marble cut by fingers deft,
This time their inner eye perceived not only veined and clouded rocks,
And carven floors once placed in tiles with blue designs of shapen blocks,
A vision clear—a woman's face—a glowing shield upon her breast,
A goddess sprung from thoughts of Zeus—the sacred teacher of the West,
They gazed until the sight grew dim—then slowly turned their backs and smiled,
For 'neath a hollow holy dome a figure sits not once defiled,
Their Pallas, windfall from the gods, an image of the might of Troy,
A statue set upon a throne of saffron gold with no alloy.

Invocation:

To you, oh wond'rous virgin queen,
  Athenian maid of deepest mind,
Whose gifts leave not one word to say,
  To us, no eager breath to find,
We lift a prayer burst from our hearts,
  In adoration long confined.

THE ROMANTIC SPIRIT

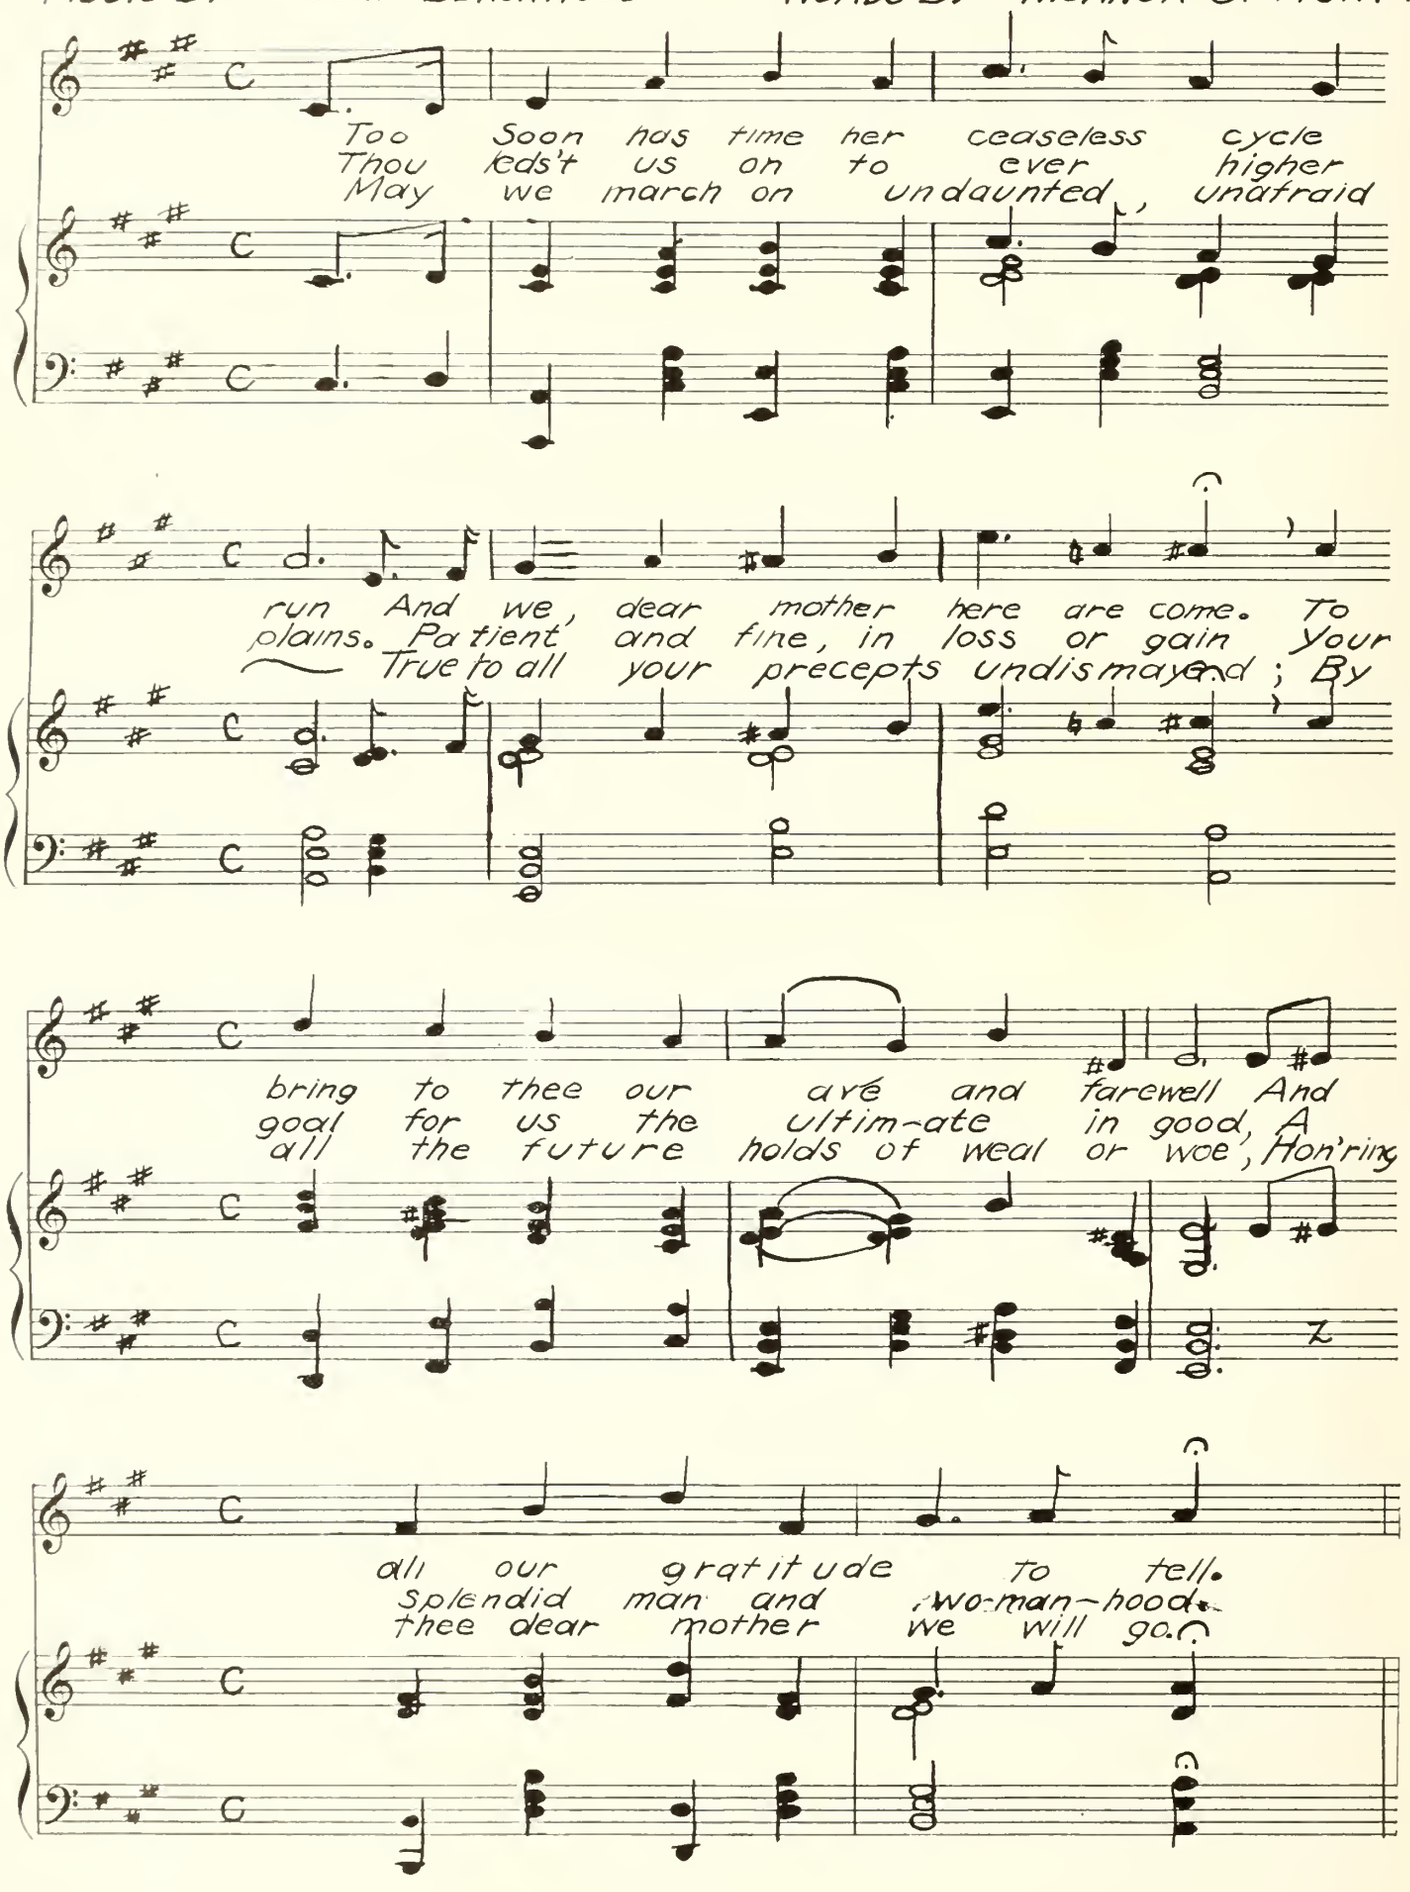
EVER UPWARD

HENRI E. ROSEN

A bit of green against the dark brown land,
  A seedling from the soil then comes to sight,
From soil in which his spark of life was fanned,
  Where he had been prepared to see the light.
Ambition early nurtured in his breast
  Within him cries aloud, "Thou shalt succeed,
And high o'er oaks about you flaunt your crest.
  But! longing must be tempered, so take heed."
The time has passed, a sapling now, he knows
  That as his limbs are reaching for the sky,
Each root unseen beneath the moist sod grows
  And staunchly bears its verdant load on high.
He braves the storm, he feels the sun's warm ray,
  And when the icy blasts of winter blow,
With stronger gusts, he finds that he must sway,
  For vain resistance often meets with woe.
But o'er the ground Time's hand begins to strew
  The waving fern, and cushioned mosses green;
The tree no longer has the ground in view
  But trusts in its support, his strength unseen.
And he will grow until the shadows fall
  From his proud head on all trees below;
Then he may see his powers have been small—
  In barren earth, could he have flourished so?
His goal attained, a bird may fly o'erhead,
  And she has reached his height and gone still higher.
He watches without envy—glad, instead!
  For he who's great, a greater will admire.

— CLASS SONG —

MUSIC BY — JOHN BLACKWOOD WORDS BY — NICANOR G. MONTT



Too Soon has time her ceaseless cycle
Thou leds't us on to ever higher
May we march on undaunted, unafraid run And we, dear mother here are come. To plains. Patient and fine, in loss or gain Your True to all your precepts undismayed; By bring to thee our ave and farewell And goal for us the ultim-ate in good, A all the future holds of weal or woe, Hon'ring
all our gratitude to tell.
Splendid man and woman-hood.
thee dear mother we will go.

PRESIDENT'S ADDRESS

GEORGE MAWHINNEY

Teachers, Classmates:

As I stand here tonight, I hardly know whether to feel happy or sad. I should feel happy because this is a night I have been looking forward to for four years. Yet now that the time for graduation has come, I realize that it is with a feeling of regret that I shall leave Brookline High School. While here, I have, like all of you, benefited from the teaching I have received, not only in subject matter but also in establishment of certain standards of behavior. Like all of you, I have made many new friends, not only among my fellow-students but also, I hope, among the members of the faculty. On the other hand, like all of you, I am glad that I shall receive the material reward which the High School gives for completing a course of study. Like all of you, of course, I am glad to be attempting something new; that fact in itself is an adventure.

May I then thank the members of the faculty for their interest in the Class of 1936.

May I also extend to the Class of 1936 my best wishes for the future. May they look back on this night as the beginning of a happy and successful career.

CLASS ORATION

ROBERT LYNCH

My Classmates:

We are gathered for what is probably our next-to-last undergraduate assembly, and I choose at this time to dispense with the customary class day oration in which the glories of the ancients are rehearsed with a fervor that would make a Demosthenes envious. A common fight talk is more in keeping with the tenor of the time than the classic mouthings to which class day spokesmen are traditionally adherent.

I do not speak to you, classmates, as one grown stoop-shouldered from experience. Rather, do I pass on advice given me by my father, which from its logic appears to me to be worthy of repetition.

To use the jargon of the day, we are "big shots" in our present circle. We have weathered the storm of high school days, and as is evidenced by our approaching graduation, we have reached port safely. At this moment, we have every reason to exult. We have been put to the test and have not been found wanting, but let us not be deceived in our exultation. We are about to experience a rude transition from the comparatively narrow scholastic circle to a much broader and more tempestuous sphere.

If we carry the same competitive spirit generated in us on the athletic field and in the classroom, if we fight the good fight with a never-say-die zeal, if we do not break faith with ourselves and our principles, if we can face adversity and persevere with the philosophy of the optimist, the result is inevitable. Victory in the game of life is assured, my classmates, and well might we look back on the romantic days of high school, grown mellow in retrospect, and feel gratified for the character molded in us by our teachers, which enabled us to hold the successes and buffets of the world with stoical grace.

CLASS HISTORY

MARGARET BENNETT and WOODBURY RAND

WE began the fall of 1932 with the knowledge that though our grammar school diplomas were proudly hung on the wall of our living rooms, our reputation at high school had yet to be established. The rest of the school looked at us with questioning eyes and a shake of the head; little did they realize, however, that we were to become such a distinguished class four years later in our careers.

We organized ourselves under the leadership of Stanley Livingston, president; Mildred McClellan, vice-president; Peggy Bennett, secretary, and Bernard Swartz, treasurer. We then had our first contact with the high school system. We had the privilege of sending our president and Barbara Cohen to the Court of Justice, in the meantime delegating Haskell Harris to the Student Council. Norma Green and Peggy Bennett led the way in Dramatics by obtaining important roles in "Ladies of the Jury," and also in Prize Speaking by reaching the Finals. Marjorie Littauer performed not only the remarkable feat of making the First Honor Roll but continued there during each of the four years. In athletics, Lorraine Abrams, Doris Hattersley, Ethel Crowley, Jane Samble and Betty Webber made the varsity swimming team. After such a truly fine beginning we were all rewarded with the annual two-month vacation.

September came around, bringing with it not only a New Deal in the country but one here in school which materially changed our government and its personnel. The system called for a division of five houses, each supervised by a House Master with the aid of a House Council. Miss Sawyer became our guide and friend as the House Master of Shailer House.

Class elections, the old stamping ground of Democracy, gave John Blackwood the presidency, Mildred Murphy the vice-presidency, Peggy Bennett the secretaryship and John McEvoy the privilege of balancing the budget. Stanley Livingston and John Connolly went to the Court of Justice, while Stanley, accompanied by Mildred Murphy, proceeded to the Teacher-Student Council.

Norma Green achieved the outstanding feat for a Sophomore of winning the coveted books at the Prize Speaking Contest, while we were well represented in the cast of that exciting melodrama "Gold in the Hills." In football, George Mawhinney received his letter for the varsity, and in swimming, another star, Myron Wilcox, made his first varsity "B." In the middle of the year the Girls' League elected Peggy Bennett as its vice-president and Betty Greene as secretary. Though still very naïve in many respects, we felt that our first two years had in them much promise for the future.

The most auspicious event possible marked the commencement of our third year, a thirteen to seven victory over Newton, our ancient and honorable rival. This game was won in no small part by the heroic efforts of John Connolly, Dale Metzler, Richard Murray, William Ready and James Thompson. At voting time we re-elected our president and treasurer of the Sophomore term and added Barbara Cohen as vice-president and Betty Webber as secretary. Our president and treasurer safeguarded our rights at the Court of Justice, and our secretary represented us on the Teacher-Student Council.

Not only did Esther Brody and Caroline Nunan prove that once again Shailer was capable of producing stellar speakers, but many of us participated in "Big-Hearted Herbert."—Then William Rathgeber, Lucienne Hakim, Marie Guarante, Suzanne DeAvila, Melvin Van Dam, Phyllis MacLeod, Norma Cunningham, Judith Cohen, Dorothy Milton, and Horacio Daubon with others assisted in the presentation of the highly colorful and instructive Pan American Pageant.

In the Girls' League, Shailer held the majority of offices with Betty Greene as president, Peggy Bennett as secretary and Betty Webber as treasurer. We were exceedingly proud of Gustav Lind for winning the Lincoln Medal in Physics, and of Arnold Gale for carrying off the honors in Mathematics. Meanwhile Norma Green had been sent to Washington to the annual Red Cross Convention. Shailer House as a whole contributed the large quota of forty-one members to the English Club with Dorothy Covich as business manager and with Jane Samble as secretary-treasurer. In Le Cercle Français, Herbert Landsman was chosen vice-president, while in the German Club, Barbara Laven was secretary.

In basketball Frank Beckerman, John Connolly and Israel Peraner made the varsity. Lloyd Burton, John McEvoy and Myron Wilcox were among the natators who received varsity letters, while later in the year Thomas Richmond with John Connolly made a major "B" in baseball. Stanley Livingston and Harold Sklar were our contributions to the perennially successful track team. While college boards and finals drew near, James Thompson and Francis

Murphy stood out as leaders in their respective sports of tennis and golf. In sports for the girls Mary Lally, Mary O'Connor and Ettabell Sidd were active in field hockey, tennis and swimming.

Henri Rosen became one of the able assistant editors of the "Challenge," and Sanford Leventhal began a two-year domination of the sports department of the "Sagamore," while Eleanor West took charge of the advertising for both these periodicals. As a farewell gesture to a highly commendable year Betty Webber and Barbara Cohen were selected Head Marshal and Chief Aide for Class Day.

And now we approach the climax of our history. In the autumn of the year nineteen hundred and thirty-five we again convened, for the last and best year at this famous institution. The election returns gave to John Blackwood and John McEvoy, for the third consecutive time, the president's and treasurer's duties. Florence Bailey held the most votes for vice-president and Betty Webber the most for secretary. In Packard House, Charles Lauriat took the reins as president with Marie Clarke vice-president, Francis Lewis secretary, and Pearl Koufman treasurer. Our illustrious football captain, George Mawhinney, was rewarded by his numerous admirers with the important position of president of the graduating class. Betty Webber was chosen vice-president, Norma Green custodian of the minutes, and John O'Neill chancellor of the exchequer. We were not only represented at the Court of Justice by George Kilman, John Blackwood, Woodbury Rand and Charles Lauriat, who incidentally was the president of the Teacher-Student Council, but the Chief Justice was none other than our popular James Thompson. Our captain of marshals, John McEvoy, was honored as prosecuting attorney. With the big item of elections off our docket, we turned toward other fields.

In the Girls' League, Betty Gallison led the Senior Advisers, and Phyllis Slaman guided the Home Room Committee. The interesting and instructive vocational talks were presented with the help of Miss Sawyer and Nancy Weston.

Being such a talented class, we naturally continued to shine in the language clubs. Herbert Landsman was elevated to the presidency of the French Club with Stephen Mann as treasurer. Richard Gladstone led the German Club with Anne Parker as vice-president, while Fred Shelton, president, and Jack Churchville, secretary-treasurer, contributed greatly to the success of the Spanish Club. John Blackwood was presiding officer at the English Club meetings.

Along with our ability to speak and understand foreign languages came our aptitude for journalism. Richard Gladstone and William Berman became managing editors of the "Sagamore" with Henri Rosen and Herbert Landsman their assistant editors.

Upon viewing our numerous accomplishments, the historian is not surprised that Marjorie Littauer, Christine Ferguson and Gustav Lind made the First Honor Roll, and that Betty Greene, Norma Green, Christine Ferguson, Betty Webber, Peggy Bennett, Eleanor Levy, Arnold Gale, James Schaye, John McEvoy, Richard Gladstone and Charles Lauriat won the distinction of becoming members of the Honorary Society.

Turning to athletics, we find that among the lettermen in football were Captain George Mawhinney, Joe Walsh, Israel Peraner, Arnold Gale, Frank Sullivan, Irving Rittenburg, James Thompson, Albert Landry, Richard White, John Davidson, William Rathgeber, John Connolly, George Kilman, Robert Lynch, Frank Shaughnessy, Thomas Sullivan and George McGuire. Swinging into basketball, we find that Captain Israel Peraner, John Connolly and Arnold Gale were outstanding. The highlight in track was undoubtedly the sensational performance by Robin Hartmann. He won the sum of 82 points in various meets, was undefeated in both the high and low hurdles, only once was surpassed in the high jump, and finally he equaled the World's Amateur Record for the 60-yard high hurdles set by our own coach, Monty Wells. However, the success of the team would not have been possible if it had not been for the efforts of the Abels brothers, Jacques and Monroe, Joe MacDonald, Gene Redmond, George Mawhinney and Carlton Lewenberg. Baseball was not without its stars. Outstanding were the all-interscholastic Joseph Walsh as captain and Frank Sullivan, Thomas Richmond, Ramon Silton and James Woodlock. Nor was the swimming team shy of stars with Joel Berkowitz, William Cotter, Albert Landry and George Kilman splashing their way to many victories.

Among the girls in sports Catherine McGrail, Mary Murphy, Mary Hoopes, Suzanne DeAvila, Doris Hattersley and Blanche Tarlin upheld the school's prestige in hockey, basketball and swimming.

Now, "last scene of all that ends this strange, eventful history" is Class Day with its colorful costumes and smart drills, and the Class Day dinner with its speeches and tributes. We have had an excellent record for a class during the past few but happy years. It behooves us now to go on and continue our triumphant ways, and to make those successes out of ourselves which will justify the predictions "of noble having and of royal hope" with which our friends greet us. Long live our class of Brookline High School, 1936.

May you go to France and learn how to speak french.
Samuel "Biff" Biff

LAST WILL AND TESTAMENT

We, the class of 1936 of Brookline High School, being feather-brained and "taiched-in-the-haid," do leave the following bequests to all the yearlings still grazing in the pastures of knowledge. May they never be led to the slaughter house! Amen! And so-o-o——

1. Joel Berkowitz leaves several pairs of pants which he until recently declared were stylish but now confidentially admits he has outgrown.
2. Jack "Odds-On" Davidson leaves a hot tip on the third race at Suffolk Downs to all and sundry who may wish it.
3. We leave Joe Cuetara on very intimate terms with a certain venerable Quaker gentleman.
4. George "Joe E. Brown" Kilman leaves his aquatic ability to some other poor fish.
5. George Mawhinney leaves a box of rivets for Shirley McMillan to mend her broken heart.
6. William Cotter leaves sadder and, we fear, not wise enough.
7. Rita Buckley leaves for California and all points west, with a stop over at Hanover, N. H., so that she may look over the prospects (football) for next year.
8. Mildred "Variety" McClellan leaves Fran Lewis with a feeling that he really is different.
9. Virginia "Homebody" Markle leaves her "line" to any girl who wishes to hang herself.
10. To some enterprising Junior we leave the task of discovering who is the mysterious "she", whom Miss Bliss frequently quotes.
11. We express the hope that Joe O'Brien is only "hand in glove" with Phyllis Eaton and not "hand in pocket."
12. John McEvoy leaves firmly convinced that he knows of one fellow who isn't a gentleman but who still prefers blondes.
13. We leave the hint that Daniel was safer in his lions' den than he would be trying to get a date with Jane Samble.
14. Now that Norma Cunningham and Barbara McNeilly are leaving, B.H.S. is not longer "in the red."
15. Arnold Gale leaves an excess four feet to widen the stage.
16. Bob Lynch leaves his soap box to start the fires next winter.
17. We nominate to the Hall of Fame, Virginia Steverman as our favorite ticket-taker.
18. The Abels Bros. depart, while we regret that we didn't have time to roll up the cuffs of our trousers.
19. We bequeath Mr. Roman a high soprano voice with which he can inject rhythm into the "third declension." (Yea man!)
20. To football aspirants we pass on the information that one of Mr. Brown's ancestors sailed on the good frigate Constitution, and that is why she is so often quoted at Tech field.
21. Henri Rosen still leaves a doubt in our minds as to how a fellow can break an arm while shadow-boxing.
22. Fred Shelton leaves discouraged, having lost a job as a tutor to nobility—they found that he couldn't raise his dukes so he went down for the count.
23. Finally to Rickey Bonnelli, Herb Lee, Bernie Lawlor, and others, we leave the joy of upholding the standards of Packard House for a year (or years) to come.

Signed

ADVERTISEMENTS

It has been a real pleasure to contribute our share toward the success of this yearbook.

We sincerely hope that the many pleasant contacts we have made will prove of lasting endurance. It will be a privilege to serve the Class of 1936 for many years to come.
